You’re invited to engage in strategic conversations on local science curriculum development.

2018 Summer Institute NCDPI K-12 Science:
School Improvement through Local Curriculum Development

Institute Description:
During this three-day session, participants will support the development of local science curriculum by focusing on specific school improvement tools. K-12 teachers will work collaboratively to review, adapt and improve existing science resources. Local, state and national science resources will be shared.

Who is eligible?
- Science leaders working with grades K-12 who are likely to use the workshop content with others in a professional development setting
- District teams (one district leader, one high school, one middle school, and two elementary teachers)
- Individual teachers

COST: FREE!  CEUs provided!
Participants are responsible for transportation expenses, meals and lodging, if required. Each participant will also need to bring a laptop with wireless capabilities for use during the workshop.

How do I register?
